Course Information

If you want to learn the essentials of Business Analysis and how to apply them to systems development projects, this course will help you. You may be an aspiring Business Analyst or newly appointed to the job. Your starting point might be in IT or in a business role. The course explains BA principles, terminology and techniques from the ground up – the foundations. It is highly practical and based on a realistic case study. So you will not just learn theory, but also things that you can apply in practice right away.

What you will learn. The course starts by explaining the Business Analyst role, illustrated by the course case study. You will learn how to apply some key techniques. Mind Maps help you to document business scenarios quickly and effectively. They also support the creative thinking needed to solve business problems and develop effective solutions. Stakeholder analysis is a key activity for all projects. You will learn how to identify stakeholders and prioritise and engage them in a project.

So - you will learn some useful new skills and how to apply them. The course will also help if you are studying for professional exams or preparing for the interview for your first Business Analyst role. You will be able to give credible answers and demonstrate a good understanding of the job. So, if you want to learn something useful that you can apply in practice and will help to develop your career in Business Analysis, please dive in and join the course. I look forward to working with you! Start the course now!
